Rumors about a divorce and, intrigues of the Palazzo in Monte Carlo.

Albert II of Monaco and Charlene

Rumors about a definitive break between Princess Charlene and Albert II of Monaco, which even speak of a possible divorce between the two. In addition to the rumors about the state of health of the princess, there are also rumors that speak of court intrigues at the Grimaldi house. These rumors would see Albert of Monaco as part of a sort of "conspiracy".

It all probably stems from the vague answers given when asking where Princess Charlene is. There are those who suppose that the princess does not want, after a long time away from the palace, to go back to her "old life".

As if the same convalescence as a result of health problems. We recall that Princess Charlene had been hospitalized for more than 4 months in a specialized institution due to great fatigue and weakness.

A state of health and mental due to the problems he had encountered following an ENT operation. For this reason, on March 12, the palace announced in a statement that Charlene of Monaco was better, but that she had to continue her recovery in Roc Agel, with her relatives.

In short, Princess Charlene would no longer live in the Palace, also because she would see it as the scene of too many disappointments, which is why she would be staying in Roc Agel, on their property.

Also sources close to the princess report for the first time Charlene uttered the word 'divorce'. An event certainly considered unthinkable for Alberto.

In fact, since she returned, no one has seen her, on the other hand there are no official photos or videos.

Intrigues at the palace

In the Principality of Monaco, a total power struggle is said to be underway.

The story began because of documents that have become famous under the name of "Dossier du Rocher", which were made known on a website and which risk causing a scandal.

The documents concern four confidants of Albert II : Didier Linotte, the French president of the Monegasque Supreme Court, Claude Palmero, the accountant and administrator of Albert II's assets, Laurent Anselmi, the sovereign's chief of staff, and Thierry Lacoste, the lawyer of His Serene Highness.

The officials, who are defined as "a sort of discreet and sprawling G4" in the documents, allegedly took the side of Patrice Pastor, who owns prestigious real estate companies, giving rise to a real clash between elites.

However, the case is very complex, a matter between millionaires that is also presumably played out through mechanisms intended to inflate the housing market.

Regarding the whole question, although reported by some newspapers such as “Le Monde”, Albert II, would see all this as an attack on the Principality , that is, a maneuver destined to its destabilization.
